A Leyden jar (or capacitor) is electrostatically charged with a Wimshurst generator and then disassembled. In its disassembled state, the parts can be handled freely and touched together with no observable result. However, when the Leyden jar is reassembled and electrical contact is made between the inner and outer conductors a dramatic electrical discharge results.

PIRA DCS 5C20.30